Tentative Feminist Studies Course Offerings - 2016-2017

Concentrations:
1 = Culture, Power, and Representation. Focuses on representation as both political and aesthetic. Situates the study of everyday life practices and cultural forms in the context of larger political and historical relations.
2 = Law, Politics, and Social Change. Examines social change through legal, economic, and political processes. Emphasizes movements for social justice and struggles over gender, race, class, and sexuality.
3 = Science, Technology, and Medicine. Explores how science, technology, and medicine reshape relations of power and knowledge. Highlights the centrality of ethical concerns and values in the scientific production of gendered, raced, and sexed bodies. (Note: students may petition to take one lower division or upper-division course in the sciences for the concentration with the approval of their faculty advisor).
4 = Sexuality Studies. Examines institutions and power relations through the category of sexuality. Explores bodies and practices across geographical and cultural borders

Note: "Feminist studies is an interdisciplinary major that includes courses taught by affiliated faculty in other departments. However, feminist studies majors must take a minimum of five courses at UCSC taught directly in the Feminist Studies Department, i.e., courses designated FMST, not including course 193, 198, or 199. Two Education Abroad Program (EAP) courses may count towards the major; three transfer courses may count towards the major; and the total combined number of EAP and transfer courses that may count towards the major is a maximum of three."
