

Feminist Studies Course Offerings Summer 2009

Concentrations listed at left margin: 1 = Culture, Power, and Representation. Focuses on representation as both political and aesthetic. Situates the study of everyday life practices and cultural forms in the context of larger political and historical relations.

2 = Law, Politics, and Social Change. Examines social change through legal, economic, and political processes. Emphasizes movements for social justice and struggles over gender, race, class, and sexuality.

3 = Science, Technology, and Medicine. Explores how science, technology, and medicine reshape relations of power and knowledge. Highlights the centrality of ethical concerns and values in the scientific production of gendered, raced, and sexed bodies. (Note: students may petition to take one lower division or upper-division course in the sciences for the concentration with the approval of their faculty advisor).

4 = Sexuality Studies. Examines institutions and power relations through the category of sexuality. Explores bodies and practices across geographical and cultural borders.
